PREFACE

This report presents statistics on the number of inhabitants of the State, its counties, and minor civil divisions (townships, etc.). In addition, separate figures are also presented for urban places, wards of cities of 5,000 or more, and other areas of the State. These data are based upon tabulations from the Seventeenth Decennial Census of the population of the United States, its Territories, and possessions conducted as of April 1, 1950. Provision for the Seventeenth Decennial Census was made in the act providing for the Fifteenth and subsequent decennial censuses which was approved on June 18, 1929.

The major portion of the information compiled from the Census of Population of 1950 will appear in Volume I, Number of Inhabitants, and in Volume II, Characteristics of the Population. This report is a preprint of Chapter 12 (Idaho) of Volume I, which is to present, in a single publication, statistics on the number of inhabitants for each State.

The materials presented here will also appear as Chapter A of Part 12 (Idaho) of Volume II. Volume II will comprise a series of separately published parts, one for each State and a summary for the United States. The use of separate parts makes the basic materials on characteristics of the population for a given State available to the public in a single publication. Within the part for a State, Chapter A will recapitulate the statistics on the number and distribution of the population within a State; Chapter B will present statistics on the general characteristics of the population of the various political subdivisions of the State, such as counties, incorporated places, and the like; and Chapter C will present data on the detailed characteristics of the population of the larger areas within the State, such as cities of 100,000 inhabitants or more and standard metropolitan areas.

The materials presented here were prepared under the supervision of Howard G. Brunzman, Chief, Population and Housing Division, and Dr. Henry S. Shryock, Jr., Assistant Chief for Population Statistics, by Dr. Henry D. Sheldon, Chief, Demographic Statistics Section, and Charles P. Brinkman, Chief, Population Distribution Unit; the compilation of the statistics was under the direction of Robert B. Voight, Assistant Chief for Operations. The collection of the information on which these statistics are based was under the supervision of Lowell T. Galt, Chief, Field Division. The geographic work, including the delineation of special types of urban territory and the preparation of maps, was under the supervision of Clarence E. Batschelet, Chief, Geography Division.

IDAHO

Number of Inhabitants

The State.—Idaho was organized as a Territory in 1863. Its area was reduced in 1864 by the organization of Montana Territory and in 1868 by the organization of Wyoming Territory. Idaho attained its present boundaries in 1873 with the transfer of six square miles to Montana following a resurvey of the Continental Divide. Idaho was admitted to the Union in 1890 as the forty-third State. Its population on April 1, 1950, according to the Seventeenth Census, was 588,637. The State has a land area of 82,769 square miles. In 1950 there was an average of 7.1 inhabitants per square mile as compared with an average of 6.3 in 1940. Among the States and the District of Columbia, Idaho ranked forty-fourth in population and tenth in land area.

In 1870, the first year in which the Territory was separately enumerated in a Federal census, Idaho had a population of 14,999 (table 1). In 1950, 80 years later, the population of the State was 39 times as large. In the twentieth century, the rates of population growth ranged from 3 percent for the decade 1920 to 1930 to 101.3 percent for the decade 1900 to 1910. Between 1940 and 1950, the population increased by 63,764, or 12.1 percent, over the 524,873 persons enumerated in 1940.

Usual place of residence.—According to usual Census practice, which dates back to 1790, each person enumerated in the 1950 Census was counted as an inhabitant of his usual place of residence or usual place of abode, which is generally construed to mean the place where he lives and sleeps most of the time. This place is not necessarily the same as his legal residence, voting residence, or domicile, although, in the vast majority of cases, these different bases of classification would be identical.

In the application of this rule, persons were not always counted as residents of the places in which they happened to be found by the census enumerators. Persons in places where guests usually pay for quarters (hotels, etc.) were enumerated on the night of April 11, and those whose usual place of residence was elsewhere were allocated to their homes. Visitors found staying in private homes, however, were not ordinarily interviewed there. Information on persons away from their usual place of residence was obtained from other members of their families, landladies, etc. If an entire family was expected to be away during the whole period of the enumeration, information on it was obtained from neighbors. A matching process was used to eliminate duplicate reports for persons who reported for themselves while away and were also reported by their families at home.

Persons in the armed forces quartered on military installations were enumerated as residents of the States, counties, and minor civil divisions in which their installations were located. Members of their families were enumerated where they actually resided. In the 1950 Census, college students living away from home were considered residents of the communities in which they were residing while attending college, rather than as persons temporarily absent from their parental homes as was the practice in 1940. In 1950 the crews of vessels of the American Merchant Marine in harbors of the United States were counted as part of the population of the ports in which their vessels were berthed on April 1, 1950. In 1940 such persons were treated as part of the population of the port from which the vessel operated. Inmates of institutions, who ordinarily live there for long periods of time, were counted as inhabitants of the place in which the institution was located; whereas patients in general hospitals, who ordinarily have short stays, were counted at, or allocated to, their homes. All persons without a usual place of residence were counted where they were enumerated.

Urban and rural population.—The 1950 urban population of Idaho numbered 252,549 persons, or 42.9 percent of the population of the State (table 1). The urban population was living in the 33 urban places in the State. More than three-fifths of the urban population was living in the nine cities of 10,000 inhabitants or more in the State (table 2).

The 1950 rural population of Idaho comprised 336,088 persons, or 57.1 percent of the population of the State (table 1). Of the rural population, 38,666 persons, or 11.5 percent, were living in the 23 incorporated and 2 unincorporated places of 1,000 to 2,500 inhabitants (table 2).

Urban definition.—Under the urban definition established for use in the 1950 Census, the urban population comprises all persons living in (a) places of 2,500 inhabitants or more incorporated as cities, boroughs, towns,¹ and villages; (b) the densely settled urban fringe, including both incorporated and unincorporated areas, around cities of 50,000 or more; and (c) unincorporated places of 2,500 inhabitants or more outside any urban fringe. The remaining population is classified as rural. According to the urban definition used in previous censuses, the urban population comprised all persons living in incorporated places of 2,500 inhabitants or more and areas (usually minor civil divisions) classified as urban under special rules relating to population size and density.

In both definitions, the most important component of the urban territory is the group of incorporated places having 2,500 inhabitants or more. A definition of urban territory restricted to such places, however, would exclude a number of equally large and densely settled places, merely because they were not incorporated places. Under the old definition, an effort was made to avoid some of the more obvious omissions by the inclusion of the places urban under special rules. Even with these rules, however, many large and closely built-up places were excluded from the urban territory. To improve the situation in the 1950 Census, the Bureau of the Census set up, in advance of enumeration, boundaries for urban-fringe areas around cities of 50,000 or more and for unincorporated places outside urban fringes. All the population residing in urban-fringe areas and in unincorporated places of 2,500 or more is classified as urban according to the 1950 definition. (Of course, the incorporated places of 2,500 or more are urban in their own right.) Consequently, the special rules of the old definition are no longer necessary.

There were no urban-fringe areas in Idaho. The urban population of Idaho, according to the 1950 urban definition, therefore, included the 234,138 inhabitants of the 29 incorporated places of 2,500 inhabitants or more and the 18,411 inhabitants of the 4 specially delineated unincorporated places of 2,500 inhabitants or more. Since there were no places urban under special rule in Idaho according to the old definition, the urban population under the old definition consisted of the population of the 29 incorporated places of 2,500 or more. The effect of the change in the definition, therefore, is that the new definition classifies as urban the 18,411 inhabitants of the four unincorporated places of 2,500 or more who would have been included in the rural population under the old definition.

Although the Bureau of the Census has employed other definitions in the course of its history, the statistics on the population by urban and rural residence for the years 1870 to 1940 are shown in accordance with the old definition. The 1950 statistics are shown in accordance with both the new and old definitions.

Trends of urban and rural population.—Trends in the urban and rural population can be examined only on the basis of the old definition. On that basis, the urban population of Idaho rose from 10,003 in 1900 to 234,138 in 1950 (table 1). Both the largest numerical increase and most rapid rate of growth over the 50-year period came in the decade 1900 to 1910, when the urban population increased by 59,895, or 598.8 percent. The 1950 urban population was 57,430, or 32.5 percent, above the 1940 level of 176,708. There were no cities of 10,000 inhabitants or more in Idaho in 1900; by 1950 there were nine with a combined population of 159,790 (table 3). Each of these nine cities shared in the growth of the urban population between 1940 and 1950, with the rates of growth ranging from 21.4 percent for Coeur d'Alene to 76.1 percent for Moscow (table 4). The proportion of the population of Idaho living in urban territory was more than six times as large in 1950 than it had been in 1900—39.8 as against 6.2 percent.

The rural population of Idaho, which was 151,769 in 1900, rose to 354,499 in 1950 (table 1). Both the largest numerical increase and most rapid rate of growth in the rural population over the 50-year period took place in the decade 1900 to 1910, when the increase was 103,927, or 68.5 percent. The gain for the decade 1940 to 1950 was 6,334, or 1.8 percent. The proportion of the population of Idaho living in rural territory dropped from 93.8 percent in 1900 to 60.2 percent in 1950.

Counties.—The counties in Idaho ranged in size from Clark with a population of 918 to Ada with a population of 70,649. Yellowstone National Park, part of which is located in the State, is independent of any county organization. Between 1940 and 1950, 22 of the 44 counties in Idaho increased in population. Of the counties which had population gains between 1940 and 1950, all but Butte and Power also had had increases in the previous decade. More than three-fifths of the population gain in the State was concentrated in Ada, Bannock, and Canyon Counties, the most populous counties in the State (table 5).

Minor civil divisions.—To the primary political divisions into which counties are divided, the Bureau of the Census applies the general term "minor civil divisions." The minor civil divisions in Idaho are election precincts, except that in Fremont County there are a few unorganized townships. The incorporated cities, towns, and villages form subdivisions of the minor civil divisions in which they are located.

Table 6 shows statistics on the population of each county by minor civil divisions for the last three censuses. The population of each incorporated and unincorporated place is shown in italics under the population of the minor civil division in which it is located. When an incorporated or unincorporated place lies in two or more minor civil divisions, the population of the several parts is shown in table 6 in the appropriate counties and minor civil divisions, and each part is designated by "part." Figures on the total population of such places are given in table 7. Unincorporated places are designated by "uninc." Changes between the 1940 Census and the 1950 Census in the boundaries of areas listed are shown in notes to table 6. For changes in boundaries prior to the 1940 Census, see reports of the Sixteenth Census (1940), Population, Vol. I, pp. 279-285, and reports of earlier censuses.

Incorporated and unincorporated places.—In 1950 there were 188 places incorporated as cities, towns, or villages and 6 unincorporated places of 1,000 inhabitants or more. There were 322,139 persons living in the incorporated places, 88,001 of whom were in the 159 places of fewer than 2,500 inhabitants. Of the 20,797 inhabitants of the unincorporated places, 2,386 were in the two places of 1,000 to 2,500 inhabitants. The incorporated places ranged in size from Eddiville village with a population of 10 to Boise City with a population of 34,393.

Political units recognized as incorporated places in the 1950 Census are those which are incorporated as cities, boroughs, towns, and villages, with the exception that towns are not recognized as incorporated places in the New England States, New York, and Wisconsin.

The Bureau of the Census has delineated boundaries for the thickly settled urban fringe around cities of 50,000 or more and has also delineated boundaries for unincorporated places of 1,000 or more which are densely settled population centers without corporate limits. Although there are unincorporated places within the urban fringe, it was not feasible to establish boundaries for such places and therefore they are not identified as separate places.

The count of urban places in the 1950 Census includes all incorporated places of 2,500 or more regardless of location and unincorporated places of 2,500 or more which are located outside the urban-fringe areas. Incorporated places of less than 2,500 which lie in the urban fringe are not recognized as urban places.

¹ According to the new urban definition, the urban population comprises persons residing in urban territory but not necessarily in an urban place, which is defined as an incorporated place of 2,600 or more, or an unincorporated place of 2,500 or more located outside an urbanized area. Under the old definition, incorporated places of 2,500 or more and places urban under special rule are classified as urban places. In Idaho, there were no places urban under special rule.
